Eidia House announces a new exhibition initiative for 2009-2012, PLATO'S CAVE. Invited artists create an installation and an accompanying limited edition for the PLATO'S CAVE underground space at EIDIA House Studio.

The fifth artist in the series, Elaine Angelopoulos, creates an in situ installation: "Protect, Preserve, Perpetuate" and unique limited edition (of the same title). She utilizes the underground space of Plato's Cave to mimic the surrounds of a noted SOHO gallery basement office where she has worked for over twenty years.

Angelopoulos writes of her installation:

"'Protect, Preserve, Perpetuate' is a summation of my every day functions on the job at a reputable art gallery in lower Manhattan. I focused on basic details that underscore the various persons and things that have traversed the gallery over time. A series of floor rubbings that unify all activities that left markings from the past. A selection of my papers; to do lists, forms, mementos, and snapshots formed into a gridded scrapbook of controlled performatives."

For the "Protect, Preserve, Perpetuate" edition of 15, Angelopoulos uses a vintage Arches watercolor paper (a gift from the studio of Hannah Wilke) to form a set of paper corners to secure an artwork that is absent. (contact EIDIA House for details)

"Actions and embedded memories are traced, rubbed and repeated on paper into an enclosed menagerie that will potentially moisten in Plato's Cave. Like memories, the ecology of time and space mutate the facts that remain." Angelopoulos
